Stepping Back and Viewing the Larger Picture

This is a photomicrograph of an area within Seurat’s painting from the Robert L. Herbert book, Seurat and the Making of La Grande Jatte. The dots are simple mixtures; the orange dot, for instance, consists of brushstrokes of chrome yellow and vermilion combined with lead white. While the dot may have an independent beauty, it is in the combination of dots or in the totality of the circumstances that the full beauty is realized.
